“With the help of technology, we can catch on-pitch action that would otherwise be impossible to capture,” explains Sean McBride, Head of Sports Science. “We see this not only as a way of telling a better story through gameplay, but it also provides the opportunity to coach players using data on players they’ve never even met and trained.” With this data, players can learn about their strengths and weaknesses through real time analysis in training, both with the coach and a coach buddy. The data can also be used to identify areas of player development and should their performance not improve, it can help coach a player through the development process to help him or her return to the top. The data is used to build a match simulation that can then be personalized for the player. For example, you could have a set of data that represents the player you just signed and then have the game pick up where the previous game left off when you’re in possession of the ball. Or you can use the data to take a player to another level of play, helping him to perform at a higher level and providing a long-term pathway for player development. “It really is a technology that gives us both the players and the game partners a greater understanding of what was going on,” said Mario Ikimi, FIFA Head of Marketing, EA SPORTS. “As a game developer you can now tell a more accurate story that uses real-world data from live players, and it delivers gameplay that’s extremely authentic.” “The data gives us the ability to create more information and depth into the gameplay while increasing the level of detail in the presentation and emotion arounds the game,” continued McBride. “We see the introduction of this technology as the first of many ways in which we plan to apply real world data in creating the next generation of football, both in-game and off.” FIFA 20 introduced a variety of real-world data points, including the “New Player Performance & Weather” feature which uses 3D physics modelling to simulate the impact of different conditions on player speed and acceleration. It also introduces the “New Condition Tactics” feature, where teams can alter tactics depending on the weather conditions. For more information on FIFA 22, visit “A classic example of understatement

What's new in Fifa 22:

- FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay.
- New ways to play with your friends include two brand-new head-to-head game modes - new created-content, Career, Playground Quick Cup, Online League, and Web Cup.
- New core gameplay features include more balanced Power Rank systems; new ‘Skill Squads,’ available in both real and FIFA Ultimate Team gameplay; and all-new Instant Game Hints system in Career Mode. FIFA 25 is the first title in the FIFA franchise to include an OAR-5 iDVR system.
- FIFA 22 introduced new RPG-like rewards and progression systems, including new Skills and Player Customization. Players have more ways to earn XP, unlock new attributes, improve skills, earn new tournaments, receive new items, and activate player classes. The new Amateur Game Feed allows players to earn rewards while playing on FIFA servers regardless of their platform of choice. FIFA 25 makes it easier to swap out players after you’ve made your team, with new ‘Team Builder.’ FIFA 22 introduced a simple in-game filtering system which has been updated for FIFA 25, ensuring that you are only able to register new players and clubs.
- The Driven Battle system now allows you to jump into challenges head-to-head with other players (even if they’re on the same team). Driven Battles give you the opportunity to earn additional rewards and show off your in-game war credentials. You can also challenge other players in Custom Matches.
- FIFA 25 separates Training and Coaching modes and allows you to copy Winning Team Tactics to the Main Menu, giving you a quick way to get a jumpstart on your next game. FIFA 25 also introduces other new features, including friendlies, cup-leading reward packages, leagues, challenges, and player evaluations.
